1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 16-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wagner et al (Pat. No. 5,157,408) or Gilhousen (Pat. No. 5,859,612).

Wagner et al teach a user terminal, and a method for determining and detecting a position of a mobile object including transmitting (16; col 1, lines 16-29) a rotating radio signal from a base station such that a position of the radio signal varies with time, communicating (fig. 1) to the mobile object information about how the position of the radio signal varies with time, detecting (14; fig. 2) the radio signal at the mobile object, and determining (col 1, lines 34-46) the position of the mobile object, based on how the position of the radio signal varies with time.

Gilhousen teaches a user terminal, and a method for determining and detecting a position of a mobile object including transmitting (305, 310; abstract, line 3; fig. 8 and 9) a rotating radio signal from a base station such that a position of the radio signal varies with time, communicating (fig. 2-7, and 10-12) to the mobile object information about how the position of the radio signal varies with time 230, 270, 1035, detecting 325, 330 the radio signal at the mobile object, and determining 350, 1035 the position of the mobile object, based on how the position of the radio signal varies with time.

3. Claims 16-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Maynard (Pat. No. 6,198,528).

Maynard teaches a user terminal, and a method for determining and detecting a position of a mobile object including transmitting a rotating radio signal (ROTATING & SCANNING DEVICE) from a base station such that a position of the radio signal varies with time, communicating (fig. 2A; col 2, line 62+) to the mobile object information about how the position of the radio signal varies with time, detecting 36, 86 the radio signal at the mobile object, and determining (abstract; 84) the position of the mobile object, based on how the position of the radio signal varies with time.
